

Theoretical bases of research of personality development throughout a course of life

M.V. Yermolaeva

In this article the methodological problems of uniform periodization of person development throughout a course of life has been analysed. The statement about poliform development of the person allows to ascertain that existing concepts of a periodization cover different forms and lines of development which though are interconnected, but at the same time are independent in this connection the course of life is subordinated to the law of heterochrony. Value of working out of concept of an internal position as one of the bases of a periodization of development of the person throughout a course of life is proved.

Keywords: a periodization of development of the person, multidimensionality of personal development, a course of life, an internal position

Information about the author

M.V. Yermolaeva – Dr. of Science (psychology), Professor Head of Chair of Age Psychology, Moscow Psychological and Social University.

E-mail: MAR-ERM@mail.ru